

ABSTRACT

A viscous food containing soybean is a mayonnaise-type food which resembles mayonnaise in flavor, appearance and intended use, and is produced by mixing a tofu-like basic food material obtained by using water and soybean powder as raw materials with egg yolk, grapeseed oil, wine vinegar, pepper, mustard, and salt in a predetermined mixing ratio.